Gray Line of San Francisco's Yosemite National Park Tour

The magnificent Yosemite National Park, the gem of the United States National Parks can now be visited daily from San Francisco by taking a Gray Line day tour. Tours depart daily from Gray Line's visitor's center in the heart of Fisherman's Wharf and travels through California's rich central valley where most of the fruits and vegetables we see on our dinner table are grown. Groves of Almond, peach, pistachio and walnut trees can be seen as well as fields of Grapes, tomatoes and cantaloupe as Gray line's luxury motor coach crosses the San Joaquin valley to the foothills of the Sierra Nevada where once gold miners flocked to make their fortunes.

Soon the coach follows the Tuolumne River, a remnant of the glaciers that once carved the magnificent granite cliffs that tower over the beautiful valley. Once the coach enters the parks gates, the expert guide makes a stop at Yosemite overlook for a breathtaking view of the sheer granite cliffs, where in winter and early spring waterfalls cascade thousands of feet to the valley floor making the Tuolumne River a raging torrent.

Additional stops are made for photos of Half Dome and Yosemite falls before time is given for visitors to explore the beautiful park on their own, have lunch, walk along the river, or follow the trail to Yosemite Falls.
